PLAY GIVEN BY LOCAL TALENT

Titinia Timberlake Produced by Miss Whalen and a Cast of Local Amateurs. Large Audience. Specialty Pleases.

"Titinia Timberlake" drew a large audience to Xavier Hall Thursday evening to see the much heralded Dora Debo Whalen and the cast of local amateurs. The play is a typical western drama, with the wronged hero, the usual villain, the high minded county sheriff and the troublesome cowboys. The subterfuge, the city girl and her easily shocked mother were also in the cast with other necessary characters.

The leading parts were taken by Charles Swisher, Wallace Emmons, Charles Kimple, Frank Slonaker, Miss Rose Stock, Miss Anna McSherry and Miss Dora Debo Whalen. Alban McSherry as the negro took with the audience. Other members of the cast were James Stock, Charles Stock, Russell Frazier, Maurice Bashman, Edward Thomas and Clarence Brighner.

Special mention is due Misses Zita and Grace Ramer whose specialty "I've Got your Number" was decidedly the best thing of the evening. Other specialties were given by Charles Stock, Miss Rose Stock and Wallace Emmons.

The Citizens' Band played before the play and between the acts.

CHAUTAUQUA NEWS NOTES

Wax Reproduction of Scene at Birth of Old Glory to be One of the Exhibits at the Gettysburg Chautauqua. Other Notes.

One of the attractions at the Gettysburg Chautauqua to open next Friday will be a wax reproduction of the original scene from which was painted the picture "The Birth of Our Nation's Flag" which is credited with having saved the Betsy Ross house to the American people. The historic room and its furnishings together with the four figures, General Washington, Betsy Ross, Hon. George Ross and Robert Morris, will all be in wax. The birthplace of the American flag has always been one of Philadelphia's chief points of interest and the exhibit, which will be in a separate tent on the Chautauqua grounds, will likely be very popular.

All the merchants in town have on sale the Chautauqua tickets and the campaign inaugurated some months ago for their sale has had no let-up.

Dr. John G. Scorer, the superintendent, is expected here on Saturday to remain until after the Chautauqua. He will have active charge of all the details. George L. Kieffer is platform manager for the week.

Irvin L. Taylor, who will have charge of the training of the Chautauqua chorus, has sent out invitations to over a hundred local people to take part in the big choir. They will practice several times before the opening of the Chautauqua on Friday, August 18.

Surrounding towns are taking an interest in the success of the Gettysburg Chautauqua and their newspapers are giving considerable space telling of the attractions promised.

The presence of Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, of Merrimack fame, on the last Saturday will likely draw large crowds here and that day is expected to be one of the largest of the ten day period.

BITTEN BY COPPERHEAD

Mrs. Katie Norman, colored cook for Mrs. J. F. Boyd at Miss McGowan's cottage above Graeffenburg, went to the woodpile and as she reached for a stick of wood she felt a stinging sensation in her finger. She told of the incident and soon after a young copperhead snake was found there. It was killed. At once a ligature was tightly bound about her arm, the wound was cut open and potassium permanganate was placed in the wound. She was hurriedly taken to Fayetteville where a physician treated the bite. Her arm is greatly swollen and is very painful, but she will recover.

RAILROAD TROUBLES

The Western Maryland had three accidents on Thursday, one of which though not serious, delayed traffic so that the trains due here at 3:20 and 7:00 arrived as one train at 10:38 in the evening. The trouble was caused by an engine mounting the rails near Virginia Mills and crashing into the hill at the side of the track. Trouble was caused on the Round Top siding when three freight cars ran away and sideswiped a draught of cars, while engine 623 ran off the passing siding at Highfield doing little damage.

COAL IN SOUTH MOUNTAIN

The discovery of coal in large deposits in the South Mountain in the last few days has caused a sensation about Carlisle. While drilling for water on property leased from George J.anger, of near Hutton, by Chester C. Bashore, of the Holly Sand Company, the drill struck a vein 22 feet thick, which represents a deposit of what Chemist Wilbur F. Horn, of Carlisle, says is semi-bituminous coal of a quality something similar to the Clinton county product.

Dr. Horn has made careful analysis of the coal and believes that it is of great value if the quantities are large. The samples partake of the qualities of asphaltum and burn like a petroleum product. Lessee Bashore, an attorney, will give the deposit close attention. The drillers have not up to the present time reached the end of the deposit.

The find was entirely unexpected, although a member of the Ahi family, whose estate in the South Mountain was extensive three years ago, said that some traces of coal were found three decades ago, but it was not thought possible to mine it.

GOOD LIVER REMEDY FREE

When you suffer from any form of indigestion it is always well to take something for the liver, as usually the trouble lies there. If you are bilious, have a bloated feeling after eating, if you belch, if your skin is yellowish you may be sure it is liver trouble. What you need is something to stir up the liver, to arouse the gastric juices so that they will aid in the digestion of your food. A very good remedy for this, and one highly recommended by those who have used it, is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which you can obtain at any drugstore at fifty cents or one dollar a bottle. But if you have any doubt about its merits, and would prefer to try it first, send your address to Dr. Caldwell and he will promptly send you a free sample bottle.

Thousands of people first learned of this remarkable cure for stomach, liver and bowel troubles through a free sample. Mrs. Frank Lilly of Plainview, Ill., sent for one and it cured her and she is open in saying that she will never take pills or strong cathartics again, as Syrup Pepsin acts so mildly. Mr. W. L. Bryant, the Postmaster at Sardis, Tenn., says he will never be without it again. No sick person can afford to ignore a remedy so highly endorsed as this. It is good for all the family from infancy to old age, because it is mild, free from gripping and yet promptly effective. Furthermore, results are absolutely guaranteed or money will be refunded.

For the free sample address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 541 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

State Committee Took Up Insult to Gov. Wilson.

POLICE WERE CALLED IN

Followers of Discredited Chairman Threatened to Make Trouble and Left When Officers Appeared.

Asbury Park, Aug. 11.—Chairman James R. Nugent, of the Democratic state committee, was ousted from the office of chairman. Mr. Nugent, after calling the meeting to order, requested Judge Benjamin P. Willis, of Burlington, vice chairman of the committee, to preside. Mr. Nugent then undertook to explain to the committee how it happened that he had called Governor Wilson "a liar and an ingrate."

Nugent was of the opinion that the occasion of his remark was an entirely private affair, and expressed his further willingness to repeat the remark to Governor Wilson personally, if he felt so disposed. Nugent entered into a long and rambling account of his work he had done for the Democratic party, after which he took up his list, and beckoning Charles N. Gallagher, of Mercer county, said: "Gentlemen, I will retire."

When he had gone out with Gallagher it left the committee without a quorum. Nugent had evidently figured his conferees would be blocked from doing any business. In this belief, however, he was not properly fortified. A few minutes after he had one out Senator George C. Low, of Ocean county, appeared and completed his quorum. William F. Kraft, of Camden, who re-entered the committee room and had a second time been taken out by Nugent's friends from the room, disappeared. He was afterward located at Sea Girt, where, with Judge Carrow, he went over the stormy scenes of the meeting at Governor Wilson's reception. There was great excitement around the hotel meantime.

Called Loudly for Police.

Dan Platt and a coterie of anti-Nugent men in the corridor called loudly for the police. They said Nugent's followers had threatened their lives and they wanted protection. A squad of police in uniform was sent by Chief Smith. They scattered themselves through the corridors, dispersed the crowd and held guard at the door of the committee room. Overawed by the police, Nugent's friends from Essex dispersed, and Nugent finding the battle had gone against him, left the hotel.

With the vice chairman in the chair, Judge Willard W. Cutler, of Morris, moved that the committee adjourn for a week. The motion was lost.

Judge Howard Carrow, of Camden, said it was impossible to forget the fact that Nugent had insulted the governor; but forgetting that fact, his conduct was such that no gentleman could stand for it. Nugent, he said, had disgraced himself before the meeting, and no self-respecting Democrat should countenance these practices. Judge Nelson Dungan, of Somerset, said the spectacle he had witnessed, and in which Nugent and his allies had figured, had removed in his mind any consideration for the chairman. Judge Carrow made a motion that the office of chairman of the Democratic state committee of New Jersey be declared vacant, and that Edward E. Brose, of Gloucester, be named as his successor. This motion was unanimously adopted, after reference to Mr. Brose had been eliminated.

Adjournment was taken for two weeks, when the committee will meet in Trenton to elect a chairman.

The direct cause of the meeting and re-for-all fight was the insult of the governor in a "toast" offered by Nugent at Sea Girt on July 27 last.

Here is the "toast" which caused a sensation from one end of New Jersey to the other, and stirred Democratic circles as they had not been stirred in many years:

"I propose a toast to the governor of New Jersey, the commander-in-chief of the militia. He is an ingrate and he's a liar. I mean Woodrow Wilson. I repeat, he's an ingrate and a liar!"

Half a dozen officers of the New Jersey national guard, present at the time, gave publicity to the insult to the governor to the state guard camp.

Bryan Opposed to Secret Caucus. Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 11.—W. J. Bryan authorized the following statements: "Why the secret caucus? If the Democratic member of the house did not submit to secret caucus and on public affairs there would be no doubt concerning any of their proceedings. Why should any Democratic member submit to the secret caucus? The secret caucus is one of the worst foes of popular government. If you are opposed to it write to your member of congress and urge him to protest against it."

Harold Vanderbilt to Wed. Newport, R. I., Aug. 11.—Announcement of the engagement of Miss Eleanor Sears, the athletic Boston girl, to Harold S. Vanderbilt will, it is rumored, be made before the end of the week.

PLAISTED TO SUCCEED FRYE

Governor May Have Senatorship, But Plans Wait on Funeral.

Portland, Me., Aug. 11.—While the death of United States Senator Frye has cast gloom over the entire state, there is much speculation as to his successor, who will be a Democrat.

Governor Plaisted could have the senatorship if he would take it, which is doubtful. Others mentioned are Congressman Daniel J. McGillicuddy, Judge George M. Hanson, former Sheriff W. M. Pennell, of Portland, and Obadiah Gardner, of Rockland.

Nothing will be done until after the late senator's funeral. Then Maine will have a solid Democratic representation in the senate for the first time in years.

POPE SUBMITS TO OPERATION

Physician, With Experts Directing, Extract Pus From Knee.

Rome, Aug. 11.—Under the direction of Drs. Marchiafava and Petacci, Dr. Andrea Amici, who also is physician to the Vatican household, proceeded to puncture the pope's swollen knee, and succeeded in extracting a liquid of a serum character.

The operation gave the patient much relief. Dr. Petacci and Prof. Marchiafava visited Pope Pius, and found his general condition improved. This was attributed to the removal of the patient from his small bed chamber to more spacious quarters, which according to the pontiff's own expression, affords him the feeling of being in the open air. The walls of the room are twenty feet high.

Despite his illness, his holiness ratified the decision of the consistorial congregation presented by the secretary, Cardinal G. De Lai, appointing the Right Rev. J. J. Keane, now bishop of Cheyenne, as archbishop of Dubuque, and the Right Rev. Joseph Schrembs, auxiliary bishop of Grand Rapids, to be bishop of the new diocese established at Toledo which has been detached from the diocese of Cleveland.

The pope was worried over the illness of his sister Rosa, who is suffering from the effects of the unusually hot weather. He asked Dr. Petacci to visit her twice daily.

The other two sisters, Anna and Maria, and the pope's niece, Gilda, are caring for the patients, and frequently went from one to the other.

TOGO AT SHIPYARDS

Japanese Admiral Also Visits League Island Navy Yard.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—Admiral Tozō, who arrived here made a formal call on Mayor Reyburn at the city hall, the mayor returned the visit a half hour later, and the Japanese was then whisked away in an automobile to the navy yard, where he was the guest of Captain A. W. Grant, the commandant.

Later the distinguished Japanese visited the yards of the Cramps and the New York Shipbuilding companies. It was here that one or two of Japan's warships were built.

Attacks Monetary Commission. Washington, Aug. 11.—The "extravagance" of the national monetary commission was arraigned in the senate by Mr. Cummins, of Iowa. "The commission," he said, "has become a place for men who have lost favor with their constituents and have been defeated at the polls."

LORDS PASS THE VETO BILL

Creation of New Peers by the King is Avoided.

VOTE WAS 131 TO 114

Lord Rosebery Declares a Force Remains to Fight Dangerous Measures of the Government.

London, Aug. 11.—The house of lords passed the veto bill by a vote of 131 to 114.

When the debate on the bill was resumed, Viscount Morley, speaking for the government, announced that if the measure were defeated the king had assented to the creation of sufficient peers to guard against any possible combination of the different opposition parties by which the bill might be exposed a second time to defeat.

Viscount Morley, who made the statement in reply to appeals from Lord Rosebery and Lord Lansdowne, read it slowly from a sheet of foolscap. He said that the matter deserved an answer, plain, deliberate and beyond all cavil and mistake. He concluded:

"Every vote given against my motion not to insist on the amendments is a vote given in favor of a large and prompt creation of peers."

Admits Bill Must Pass.

Lord Rosebery admitted that it was quite clear that the bill must pass. The former premier, who spoke for the first time since the veto bill was introduced in the upper house, denounced the government for having gone to "a young and inexperienced king, not yet five months upon the throne, to ask for guarantees to pass a bill that had not even passed its first reading in the house of commons."

He concluded: "If the bill passes, there will still be force left in this house to oppose the dangerous measure of the government, and Europe and the empire will be spared the sight of a scandal which would go far to weaken the hold of the centre of the empire on its component parts."

The Earl of Camperdown, having announced that he would support the government in preference to having the upper house swamped with new peers, the Duke of Norfolk declared that if any Unionist peer supported the government he would vote with the insurgent followers of the Earl of Halsbury. Viscount Halifax adopted the same attitude.

House Votes for Salaries.

A resolution to pay members of the house of commons $2000 annually for their services was carried by a vote of 256 to 159. The resolution was moved by Chancellor David Lloyd-George in the house of commons. The chancellor said that Great Britain was the only country in the world that did not pay members for their work in parliament, which nowadays was so strenuous that the members had little time to attend to anything else.

HORSE BOLTS INTO BATHERS

Men, Women and Children Knocked Down by Running Animal.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 11.—During the running of the final heat in the polo pony race on the beach here, Wayne, ridden by Robert Sullivan, bolted into a crowd of society people lined at the great race course.

Men, women and children were knocked down in their rush to escape the animal's hoofs. Maurice Browning, a life saver, of the Narragansett Pier station, was trampled and taken home unconscious. Little Robert Maynard was also knocked down and seriously injured.

Several women fainted. Most of the crowd were in bathing costumes.

Girl Burns to Death.

Detroit, Aug. 11.—Miss Ruth Bryan, twenty-three, of Hudson, N. Y., is dead from burns received at a party in Birmingham, a village near here. While searching for her pocketbook with a lighted lamp she tripped over a rug and the lamp exploded, enveloping her in flames.

Killed by Bursting Tire.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Frank H. Whillcock, of the firm of Whillcock Brothers, merchants of this city, was killed at Scottsville in an automobile accident. The bursting of a tire hurled out Mr. Whillcock, who was returning from the Oak Hill Country Club and fractured his skull.

Lorimer Sued for $6000.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Senator William Lorimer was sued for $6000 here by the Henry Ericsson company, which avers this sum is due for work done on the senator's summer home two years ago.

CHARLES G. GATES.

Inherits Father's Fortune of About $40,000,000.

GATES' $40,000,000 MAKES SON A POWER

Latter is Sole Heir of Dead Millionaire.

Paris, Aug. 11.—John W. Gates left a fortune of between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000. A close friend of the family declared the estate to be worth near the latter than the former amount.

"This means that Charles G. Gates, only child and heir, will be one of the most powerful of the younger masters of finance in America," added this friend.

Expression of regret, not only from his wide circles of acquaintances, but from numerous Parisians who knew Mr. Gates only as a bold and successful business man, poured in upon the bereaved family.

Mrs. Gates and her son are much worn by their long period of anxiety and nursing, and much sympathy for them is expressed. As soon as word of Mr. Gates' death had been cabled to America, messages of condolence commenced to arrive at their hotel from friends and business associates in the United States and elsewhere.

The body of Mr. Gates will be placed in a vault at the International American church, in the Rue de Berri, where it will remain until taken aboard a steamship for removal to the United States. The funeral service will be held at the church Saturday.

MR. TAFT'S WEEK-END

President to Spend Three Days at Beverly.

Washington, Aug. 11.—President Taft left Washington for another week-end trip to Beverly, Mass. He will spend three days with his family, returning here on Monday morning.

Up to the last few days it was thought that congress would adjourn in time for Mr. Taft to get up to Beverly at the latest by August 15. It had been about decided to do no more traveling until that time. Now, however, the president has decided to return to the practice of week-ending, which is rather gloomy news to those hopeful of an early adjournment.

It is probable that the president will write his statehood veto message while in Beverly.

Czar Receives 6000 Boy Scouts.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 11.—Emperor Nicholas reviewed 6000 boys of the play troops from all parts of the empire. American Ambassador Guild, with the full staff of the embassy and the cabinet ministers, were present, together with a brilliant representation of society. The play troops are an offshoot of Baden-Powell's Boy Scouts, and, thanks to his majesty's interest, have developed a big movement toward the patriotic education of the young.

PUBLIC SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE

On Saturday, September 2, 1911.

The undersigned will sell at public sale the following valuable farms and properties located at McKnightstown Station:

No. 1. A farm located at the McKnightstown Station, adjoining lands of Conrad Walter, W. J. Settle, Wm. O. Andrew and Tannery lot containing 60 acres more or less, 6 acres of timberland, improved with a bank barn, a nine-room weatherboarded dwelling house; the Cashtown stream passes through the meadow; good fruit on place. The farm is in the heart of the fruit belt; buildings are in good repair; land is in a high state of cultivation and location could not be better. Several building lots will be cut off the farm at the Station and sold separately from the farm.

No. 2. A truck farm opposite the Western Maryland R.R., adjoining lands of Walter Settle, Wm. O. Andrew and the Cashtown road, containing 4 or 5 acres improved with a weatherboarded dwelling and other buildings. It is an excellent truck farm and handy to markets and is occupied by Mr. Yeager and should be seen now to understand its value for trucking purposes.

No. 3. The Tannery lots of Victor Duterra will be sold at the same time, being bounded by railroad and public road and includes the tannery, the coal bins, the scales, post office building occupied by Postmaster Simon P. Stover. The tannery building is 60 x 40 and three stories high. The machinery in building, personal property and bark sheds are reserved and will not be sold. This place could be most advantageously used as a warehouse for shipping. About 60 carloads of apples were shipped from this point last year. This property has a siding from the railroad and this siding could be made 200 feet long. A fine 25 horse power engine and a 40 horse power boiler will be offered with the property. Terms 1/3 cash and balance at 5 per cent secured by judgment. Tannery will be offered in two parts.

These properties are headquarters for a large agricultural business and one of the best situations in the county for the apple trade.

No. 4. An acre of ground near Heimelman's Station on Western Maryland railroad and adjoining lands of Mr. Biessecker on east and running to the Western Maryland railroad. This piece of land is an ideal spot for the construction of a spring lake to supply spring water to Gettysburg by gravity. A lake 150 feet wide and 400 feet in length and about 12 feet deep could be made from banks already there and springs flowing a barrel of water every three seconds at a moment's test would empty into the lake. This lake would be 113 feet above the level of Gettysburg. This acre will be sold with water rights upon condition that lake is constructed at an elevation so as not to include or do any damage to the springs feeding it located on other land of the undersigned. Mr. Stackhouse, chief engineer of Philadelphia & Reading railroad visited this place in 1905 and located this piece of ground as specially suitable for a spring lake. No. 4 will be sold at the McKnightstown property. Sale to begin at 1 o'clock when terms will be made known by W. S. DUTTEIRA.

A REMARKABLE WOMAN.

Mme. Roland and Her Tragic Role in the French Revolution.

Mme. Roland was one of the noblest examples of womanhood of her age. A child of poverty, she gradually grew to distinction, until she wielded for a time the mighty scepter which afterward led her captive to the dungeon and finally to the guillotine. In the cause of reform she was the center of all influence around which clustered those mighty spirits which seemed for a time to control the destinies of France.

In early youth she showed signs of possessing great talent. "Plutarch's Lives" gave her an almost passionate longing for the fame of the great men of past ages, and at the age of fourteen she is said to have wept because she was not a Roman or a Spartan woman.

At length the outburst came—the French struggle for liberty in 1789—so soon to degenerate into ruthless anarchy. Mme. Roland and her husband joined the Girondist party. M. Roland became minister of the interior. Mme. Roland assisted him in drawing up official papers, and to her pen is attributed the celebrated warning letter to the king, published in May, 1792, which occasioned his dismissal.

Roland denounced the more fiery revolutionists, and Robespierre, Murat, Danton and the rest became very bitter, particularly toward Mme. Roland. The lives of herself and her husband were not considered safe, and arrangements were made for them to sleep away from their regular home. Mme. Roland objected. "I am ashamed of the part I am made to play," she said. "I will neither disguise myself or leave the house. If they wish to assassinate me, it shall be at my own house."

The crisis came. On May 31, 1793, she was arrested and cast into prison, her husband being at the time away from Paris. She never obtained her liberty or saw her husband. All her jailers she converted into friends by her fascinating manner and general amiability. She devoted all her leisure hours in prison to the composition of her memoirs.

On Oct. 16 Marie Antoinette was guillotined. Later in the same month twenty of the leading Girondists, all personal friends of the Rolands, shared the same fate. And then came the turn of Mme. Roland.

At the trial Mme. Roland appeared dressed carefully in white, with her beautiful black hair descending to her waist. Unmoved by the insults to which she was subjected by her brutal judges, she maintained unflinching a dignified demeanor which might have suited a Roman matron of old, but her death was predetermined, and she was remorselessly condemned.

On the fatal day and at the same hour and place with herself a man was to be guillotined. To die first on such an occasion had become a sort of privilege among the wretched victims as a means of avoiding the agony of seeing others die. Mme. Roland waived this privilege in favor of her less courageous companion. The executioner had orders to guillotine her before the man, but she entreated him not to show the impoliteness of refusing a woman's last request.

As she passed to the scaffold she gazed on a gigantic statue of Liberty erected near it and exclaimed, "O Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!" The guillotine then took the life of one who was perhaps the most remarkable woman of the French revolution.—St. Louis Republic.

MY AEROPLANE ADVENTURES

By J. ARMSTRONG DREXEL

I—Flirting With Death at 10,000 Feet

(Copyright, 1911, by Henry M. Neely. Copyright in Great Britain and Canada. All rights reserved.)

It was on the train between Philadelphia and New York. I had just received confirmation of my altitude record of 9,897 feet—the highest man had ever been in an aeroplane—and had read in the evening papers that my great ambition to be the first to go up above the coveted 10,000 mark would never be realized, for Legagneux had risen 10,499 that afternoon.

"Well," I heard one man say to another, "they have settled Drexel's record beyond all question now. Here's a fellow who has beaten him by 500 feet."

"Yes," said the other. "It seems to get easier every day."

Easy! A man climbs and climbs and strains every nerve and muscle to the breaking point—he fights inch by inch, forcing a frail machine beyond anything it was ever intended to do—he hears the creaking of the wood-work and the wicked singing of the tautening wires, and he knows that one little ounce more of strain means where, anywhere, and it will all be over in the most horrible of ends—he plunges onward and upward, sick at heart and in body, utterly weary and hopeless, nerves gone, strength ebbing fast, brain dizzy, ears bursting and eyes swimming until a momentary spell of near unconsciousness makes him pull himself together for the awful hell of that final plunge to to pass the thousand marks. Three, four, five, six thousand I passed, each one taking an increasing length of time and requiring more of physical effort and mental and nervous strain.

Soon the hand of the aneroid began to caper back and forth. I knew I was mounting steadily, but the little instrument did not show it and finally dropped back near the starting point and stayed there. The aneroid had evidently gone higher than it was ever intended to go and was completely out of commission.

A barograph, which is a recording barometer, had been tied about my neck, and I took one hand from the control and turned the face of the barograph up toward me. Through the glass front I could see the purple line that had traced my ascent. I felt sure that I must be near the top. It seemed ages since I had started, and the terrible cold was beginning to penetrate even the thick, fur lined clothing that I had made particularly for this flight. My hands were beginning to get numb, and I felt that my ears would burst with the pressure from inside my head or, rather, with the lessening of the pressure outside.

But one sight of the barograph made me grit my teeth and shove the nose of the Bleriot a good deal higher than wisdom warranted. Instead of being near the coveted 10,000 mark, I was barely passing the 8,000 line.

No words of mine can express the disappointment and the discouragement of that moment. I was almost all the horrible possibilities of a loss of mentality and mental balance nearly two miles above the earth—with the slightest mismanagement spelling awful death—I pulled myself together again and made a final desperate effort to cross the 10,000 mark.

It was impossible for me to know whether I had succeeded or not. The last few feet were such a bitter struggle up and down, up and down, through the thin air that I could not look at the barograph and indeed could not see the line the one time I did try.

Finally, utterly exhausted and numb both in body and mind, I gave up the struggle and turned the nose of the Bleriot toward the earth.

The Drop to Earth.

I have no words to describe that descent. It would sound like the veriest drive if I should try, for only a man trained to repression of superlatives could give an idea of its horrors without making it seem like silly exaggeration.

Every reader has probably gone down fifteen or twenty floors in an express elevator. Do you remember how dizzy and sick at the stomach it made you?

My descent was made at the rate of a vertical mile in about two minutes while I was traveling horizontally at the rate of seventy or seventy-five miles an hour. In other words, my vertical speed downward was about four times as fast as that of the fastest elevator, and I had the added strain of the tremendous horizontal momentum.

The effect of this rapid descent is almost paralyzing. Those who have traveled under the new Pennsylvania railroad tunnels to New York have felt the effect of the pressure of air against the eardrums. This is about one-tenth the effect that is made upon the ears when descending in an aeroplane from a great height. In my case in coming down from 9,897 feet at my tremendous rate of speed my ears felt that they would burst, and the top of my head felt as though it would fly off at any moment. Added to this came the feeling of nausea, which grew and grew until my head swam, and just for one moment I am sure I lost consciousness. This occurred, I should say, at a height of between 7,000 and 8,000 feet.

Again, I had to bring all my self control to my rescue, but my nervous energy was ebbing fast, and I remember wondering how much longer I should be able to fight back the utter collapse that I knew was coming soon.

You must remember that all this was occurring when I had only an approximate idea of how high above the earth I was and when I had absolutely no idea of my geographical position. After I had passed through the upper strata of clouds at a height of some 4,000 feet I had not again seen the earth except for little drifting patches of indistinct drab as I flew over the rifts in the vapor, and I did not know whether I was one mile or a hundred from Philadelphia. And now I was descending so fast and was so nearly helpless, both physically and mentally, that I could do nothing except keep the Bleriot on the proper slant to give the best descent with the least possible strain.

Astray in Skyland.

My first sight of the earth as I dropped from the lower fringes of the clouds showed me that I was doomed to another disappointment. Not a sign of a city was in sight. Not a single landmark that I had been told to look out for was to be seen. Instead there were farm land and forest, plowed fields and orchards and nowhere so much as a smooth meadow fit for me to alight upon without smashing up.

For the third time I saw Death, as it were, sitting grinning on the gasoline tank in front of me. My head swam, and again, with that awful feeling of nausea, I seemed to lose consciousness for a fleeting moment. Then the sight of a small field brought me back to my senses, and I circled again to come upon it from the best direction.

Fortunately for me, I made a perfect landing. It was probably the instinct that comes of long practice that kept me from smashing up on coming to the ground, for I know that my brain was no longer working and my muscles were incapable of obeying a mental command.

I must have sat there helplessly in the machine for fully five minutes, mumbling meaningless things to myself, until I saw a woman coming to ward me. Then I stretched myself, half rose and sprawled rather than climbed down from my seat to the ground. But even then I could not stand without help.

I found that I had landed in Oreland, about fourteen miles northwest of my starting point in Philadelphia.

The After Effect.

Later came the dismaying announcement that a test of my barograph (a rough reading of which had showed approximately 9,870 feet) gave me only a little more than 9,400 feet. But the officials of the Aero Club of Pennsylvania, under whose auspices the flight had been made, were sure that a mistake had been made somewhere and so turned the instrument over to George S. Bliss, head of the United States weather bureau in Philadelphia. To the indefatigable and generous efforts of this official we owe the fact that the final official reading of 9,897 feet was given after tests to which no barograph had ever been subjected before. That was the world's record for only a short time, for a day or two later came Legagneux's wonderful feat, when he ascended 10,499 feet and made it impossible for me to realize my fond hope of being the first man to pass the 10,000 mark.

SAYS PANIC PLOT CHARGE IS LIE

Perkins Denies It Was Started to Ruin Certain Banks.

FEARS TRUST DECISIONS

Steel Trust Director Says Standard Oil Decision Should be a Warning to Other Companies.

Washington, Aug. 11.—George W. Perkins, director of the United States Steel corporation and former Morgan partner, testifying before the Stanley "steel trust" investigating committee, caused a stir when he jumped to his feet and branded as false a charge that the panic of 1907 had been started to ruin certain banks.

Representative Bartlett asked Mr. Perkins whether such was not the case, and the New York financier was not in a second, saying: "There never was a more infamous lie started than that. There is not a scintilla of truth in it."

The government's separation of the Standard Oil company into thirty-three parts, Mr. Perkins declared, was certainly a warning to corporations. He suggested that something should be done to relieve the present conditions under which, he contended, corporations could not continue to exist. Still he opposed Judge Gary's proposal for the governmental regulation of prices.

"Is it necessary in order to successfully conduct large business organizations to conduct them in any way contrary to the law of 1890, the Sherman law?" asked Representative Bartlett. "It most assuredly is necessary," replied Mr. Perkins.

"The United States Steel corporation has observed the law for the past years, has it not?" "Yes."

"Then why do you now ask that the law be changed?"

Mr. Perkins said he believed that the United States government should change its laws so that what is good in the combination might be preserved to the people.

"Is it a fact," Mr. Bartlett asked, "that the Morgan interests and other financial men of New York, by reason of great control of money, dominate the financial situation of the whole country?" "It is not a fact,"

Representative Bartlett asked Mr. Perkins whether he knew that Moore and Schley had a majority of the Tennessee Coal and Iron stock before Judge Gary and H. C. Frick went to Washington to consult President Roosevelt about the merger of that company into the United States Steel corporation.

"I do not remember. I didn't care a rap about that," said Mr. Perkins. "I was engaged in a great mass of detail. If Judge Gary and Mr. Frick knew it at that time, I knew it. I was not concerned about that."

Judge Bartlett then referred to the conspiracy charge that a group of bankers started the panic of 1907 to drive certain other bankers out of business. Mr. Perkins became excited. He jumped to his feet. Pounding the table vigorously with his fist, he said:

"My dear judge, there never was a more infamous lie started than that. There is not a scintilla of truth in it. You might just as well say that a certain group of gentlemen made a contract with Mrs. O'Leary's cow to kick over the lamp that set Chicago on fire."

"Isn't it a fact, Mr. Perkins, that these trust companies who were believed to have gone beyond a legitimate way of conducting business were the first to fail?"

"Yes, sir," Mr. Bartlett asked Mr. Perkins whether he agreed with Judge Gary as to government control of corporations. "I agree with Judge Gary," said Mr. Perkins, "that something of a constructive nature ought to be done with reference to the supervision of our great corporations. As to Judge Gary's opinion that there should be government regulation of prices, I do not agree. I would regard that as the very last resort, and it would be much regretted if it became necessary. As between going to that limit or continue as we are going now, I would prefer to go to that limit. Certain it is that we cannot go on as we are now. Our policy is absolutely antagonistic to that of Germany."

"What is it that prevents the steel corporation, believed to be successful, from going on as it is?"

To answer this, Mr. Perkins rose to his feet and talked with great enthusiasm.

"Judge, the steel corporation, perhaps, has been successful," he said. "The fear we have is based on this. We have reached a point where the executives of our government, in enforcing the laws made by congress, which they are in honor bound to do, are proceeding at this moment to dissolve the Standard Oil company. I hold no brief for the Standard Oil company, and have no affiliation with it whatever."

"Instead of trying to find out what good it has done, what it has done for labor, in lowering prices, etc., the government is now engaged in breaking it up into thirty-three different parts. If that isn't a notice to other corporations to look out, I don't know what is. That is why I am opposed to any effort to break up the steel corporation."

Vermont is a little state, but after all is not a loafer or a star boarder. In 1910 she produced $6,324,336 worth of stone, $15,574,000 worth of hay, $19,686,000 worth of potatoes, $1,764,000 worth of oats and $1,901,000 worth of corn.

It is a lucky farmer that has a silo and put up a large enough supply last fall so that he has some on hand now to feed his dairy cows during the days of flies and short pasture. He is excusable if he puts himself on the back just a bit.

EIGHT-HOUR DAY IN NAVY YARDS UPHELD

Ruling is a Victory For Organized Labor.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Organized labor won a signal victory when Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell construed the last naval appropriation act to mean that "every" employee in a shipyard where government vessels are building must receive an eight-hour day.

Heretofore it had been held by the attorney general that former appropriation acts applied the eight-hour restriction only to work actually being performed on the vessel itself.

Slight changes in the last appropriation authorizing the construction of four submarines, convinced the comptroller that the purpose was to improve the condition of all employees engaged in shipbuilding.

RESIGNS FROM U. P. BOARD

Henry Frick Will Retire From All But Few Directorates.
New York, Aug. 11.—Henry C. Frick announced his resignation from the board of directors of the Union Pacific railroad.

Mr. Frick's action was said to be due primarily to his decision to withdraw from all directorates, except those of a few companies in which he is almost heavily interested.

The board accepted his resignation with expressions of regret.

It was learned that Mr. Frick intended to leave the board of the United States Steel corporation and of several other companies. It is thought he plans to tighten his widely scattered business cares, but not to retire from activity altogether.

An Acorn Split a Bowlder.

At El Portal, near the entrance to the Yosemite National park, in California, is a remarkable example of the wonderful strength of the roots of a growing tree. A live oak in some manner started its growth years ago in a small crevice in the upper side of a large sandstone rock, where possibly a little soil had lodged, and the tender sprig grew into a sapling. Now, after years of growth, it is a tree of considerable size, and the roots, pushing down through the sandstone bowlder, have caused the mass to split apart. The tree is still growing, and the roots are gradually pushing the fragments of the immense rock farther and farther apart each year. Roots of forest trees have been known to lift great ledges of rock, splitting them off from the main vein. Shade trees in cities have been known to lift sidewalks, paved streets and heavy, deep set curbstones, and in a few cases roots have found their way into cellars and Harper's Weekly.

An excellent substitute for the butter fat contained in whole milk in the feeding ration for calves is made by preparing a gruel of equal parts of oil meal and wheat middlings. The meal should be mixed dry and a pinch of salt added. This should be stirred into boiling water. Before feeding add as much milk as one has to spare. Calves given this ration seem to do as well as when fed on whole milk. It may be added that shelled corn should be kept before growing calves, as they relish it and it does them good and with the ration mentioned gives a good balance

OSLER RIGHT; YOUTH SUCCEEDS AGE

Gray Hair Is First Sign of Age. Harmless Remedy Restores to Natural Color.

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. It is an age of "new thought," "new talent," etc., and the old man is passed by in the race. One of the first signs of coming age is the appearance of gray hairs. When you see them, act promptly. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will correct this sign, which so often deceives people into thinking that age is really upon them. It is a well-known fact that Sage and Sulphur will darken the hair. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur combines these old-time remedies with other agents, which remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize the druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented. This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. People's Drug Store, Special Agent for Gettysburg.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Ironing Cabinet That Folds Into Small Space.

The Iowa man who designed the ironing cabinet herewith shown arranged an ordinary ironing board with a sleeve ironing board within it and two racks on which to hang the clothing and then so contrived that the whole affair could be folded up. The cabinet, a flat one, stands against the wall. The lower portion is a hinged door, and the board slides into it in a vertical position and is concealed. When in use one end of the board rests on the top of the lower part of the cabinet and a pair of folding legs is straightened out and supports the other end. In the center of the large board is a sleeve ironing board pivoted on metal arms on which it can be raised several inches above the main board and used handily for its special purpose. The racks also are pivoted at the side of the cabinet so that when they are not in use they can be pushed up toward the ceiling and will look like a couple of sticks there.

Squabs on Toast.

These birds are a favorite dish for luncheon. They may be broiled, in which case they should be split and cleaned and the wings and feet bent and skewered into place over the breast, or they may be drawn and seasoned with salt and butter inside and baked in a hot oven, first pinning a slice of fat salt pork over the breasts to baste them with. Cook about twenty minutes and then arrange them on squares of hominy which have been browned delicately in hot butter. Garnish with fried potatoes and serve plain lettuce dressed with French dressing at the same time on separate plates. If they are to be broiled wrap them in buttered paper, each one by itself, and by turning the edges over securely the juices and fat may be kept inside and will waste the bird as it is turned. The paper will not ignite unless it breaks and some of the fat escapes.

Gour Milk Biscuit.

Into two cups of sour milk stir two tablespoons of melted shortening and a teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in a tablespoonful of hot water. Add a pinch of salt to make a soft dough and roll out into rounds.

HANDLING SHEEP FOR BEST PROFITS.

The first requisite in profitable sheep raising is good stock. Poor stock in sheep is a sure money loser and source of disgust and annoyance, writes M. H. Munson of Massachusetts in the New England Homestead.

The second point to be noted is the proper environment, both summer and winter, for the flock. Sheep should have an upland pasture during summer, easy access to pure water and salt and abundant shade, either natural or artificial. If possible to do so it will be found advantageous to change sheep occasionally from one pasture to another. However, if they are allowed a rather large range it is not absolutely essential.

Taking up the third point, proper feed and care, I would say that the winter quarters need not be expensive, but should be light and so arranged with windows and doors that plenty of fresh air can be admitted at will. If lambs come in September and October, when on fall feed on the nowing, and get nicely started before coming to barn, the sheep fold may be rather loosely boarded with no detriment to ewes or lambs.

Oxford sheep are popular in parts of the west; less known in New England, but a breed worth careful consideration anywhere. The ram here pictured was champion Oxford at the Iowa state fair. He is owned by George McKerron of Wisconsin. The Oxford is a large and handsome sheep, very alert and active on its feet for its size. Taken as a whole, it is a most prolific breed. An Oxford sire is as good as can be found for cross breeding and a fine mutton type. The ewes are very hardy, very prolific, are fine mothers and seldom ever have any trouble in lambing season. They are very quiet and gentle with their lambs, have an immense amount of milk, and the ewes never refuse to own their lambs. The rams at two years of age often weigh 300 pounds.

If, however, ewes do not lamb till November, December and January we must have the fold tightly boarded and papered so as to be able if necessary on cold days or nights to keep the temperature from going below freezing. By so doing we save very largely in the number of lambs raised.

Pure water and salt should be kept by the ewes and lambs in winter as well as in summer. If sheep and lambs are properly fed and watered and their feet kept dry we have gone a long way in properly caring for them. There is, however, a true need for a thorough dipping of every sheep each spring and fall to prevent or destroy ticks.

For grain rations I use two parts cracked corn, one oats, one middlings and one of bran for ewes. Begin a couple of days after lambing with one-half pint once a day per sheep and gradually increase to one and one-quarter quarts each, and in case sheep are extra large, even to two quarts a day. Lambs get grain (one part cracked corn, two parts all meal or all cake) in troughs in small pens, where they go at will through small openings. This is put in fresh each morning and night and all grain left from previous feed swept out before any fresh is put in trough. Lambs also have access to clover rowen in their own pens. Ewes get rowen from time they come to barn if we have it for them; if not, then the very best sweet, fine mixed hay, early cut or else clover hay.

Care of the Stallion.

Do not put the stallion in a foul, dark stall. All horses are fond of human companionship, and especially the stallion. The stall should be so arranged that he can see people. Solitary confinement is not good for his disposition. One essential thing is plenty of exercise. If the stallion is not used on the road or in the harness in farm work he should have a large paddock with a strong fence to run in. The horse is made for muscular effort, and it is cruelty to deprive him of it. Screen the stallies with wire netting to keep the flies out. Anything that adds to the comfort of the horses is money saved.—Farm Journal.

Paralysis From Overfeeding.
Paralysis in swine most often follows overfeeding of rich nitrogenous foods to animals that are closely confined. Pigs do best when allowed a considerable range and not fed too highly. As this affection, says the Farmers' Digest, involves the spinal cord, it is not only liable to prove fatal, but is not, as a rule, satisfactorily treated. First remove the cause. Cut down the feed and allow plenty of range, and if not fed too liberally they will forage about and get exercise. Young pigs only partially paralyzed will often come right treated as above advised.

Gluten Bread For Diet.

Mix together a pint each of sweet milk and lukewarm water, stir into it half a cake of compressed yeast broken in cake and a dessertspoonful of melted butter. Lastly add enough gluten flour for a soft batter and set to rise. When it has doubled the original bulk beat in an egg and, when this is well mixed with the sponge, enough gluten flour to enable you to knead it into loaves. It must not be stiff. Mold into small loaves and set for the final rising. This is the recipe recommended by a well known dietitian.

Old Virginia Corn Bread.

Make about a quart of mush and while it is hot pour in half a gallon of cold water. Stir in meal enough to make rather a stiff dough and set where it will keep warm until it rises. Before baking put in half teaspoonful of soda and some salt. For breakfast bake on griddle in cakes. Have griddle hot and well greased. If you wish to bake in pone let it raise awhile in pan until light.

Dressing For Fruit Salad.

Put into a double boiler one-half cupful of lemon juice, one-half cupful of orange juice, a cupful of water, a cupful of sugar and three eggs, beaten very light. Cook until the mixture begins to thicken slightly, then take from the fire and set aside to cool.

"CLOSED FOR REPAIRS"

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

There was a rather curious situation in school district No. 3 in the county of Greenfield. There were six widowers living there and all of them farmers, and three of the six were the school trustees. For several years men teachers had been employed and had given good satisfaction, but now they were to change to the other sex. Widower Thomas, the moderator, had suggested the change, and he hadn't looked the other two in the face as he did it. He had simply said that he thought a schoolma'am would teach the scholars manners as well as geography. Mr. Williams had agreed, but had at the same time said to himself:

"I understand his little game."

And Mr. Burt had agreed with him, but at the same time had said to himself:

"The cute old rascal! But I see through him as if he was made of glass. If anybody around here marries that schoolteacher it will be me!"

The three other widowers heard of the plan, and each one said it was a good thing and each one had his whiskers trimmed and his hair dyed and made ready for the struggle. A seminary was written to and a teacher sent on. It was for Widower Thomas to drive across the country in a horse and buggy to the railroad and meet her and bring her on.

Widower Thomas had hopes that the schoolma'am would be about twenty-two and good looking. The arriving teacher turned out to be all he had hoped for. He felt so well acquainted with her before they had driven half a mile that he began:

"Now, Miss White, you are coming among strangers, and I want to post you about them. There's old Jim Williams to begin with. He's one of the trustees and a widower with four children."

"And there's Moses Burt. He's another widower. Claims to be forty-eight years old, but will never see sixty again. Looking around for a young wife and ought to be ashamed of himself. Great hand to laugh at his own jokes, but if you laugh with him he'll sure think you are in love with him and pop the question."

"Then I shall not laugh."

"Then there's Job Tyler. Mebbe he's only fifty next birthday, as he claims, but he's sopping on the hair dye to beat the band. Five children for a second wife to take care of."

"That's dreadful!"

"Then there is Henry Stevens," continued the moderator. "I can't say that Henry is over forty years old, and his wife only left three children, but you can judge what sort of a man he is when I tell you that he never shed a tear at the funeral. He never even sniffled. Seemed just as unconcerned as if he was hoeing taters. I wouldn't advise no woman to marry a man like that."

"Then comes Levi Schenborn. He was to Chicago once, and he'll brag of it to you and try to make out that he is a hero. Don't you let on that you think he's anything great or you'll be a goner."

"No, I won't," answered the girl, "but are there any more?"

"Ahem! One more, Miss White. It's me. I'm a widower with a hundred acre farm and only one child. My tater crop alone last year brought me $500. Rising of forty is my age, and I can run down a calf. Got a melo-ton in the house and am willing to buy a red ingrain carpet and lace curtains for the parlor. In case I get married I shall go on a wedding trip to Niagara Falls and not mind the expense."

"And are there no young men in the neighborhood?" asked Miss White.

"Just one, and he's a hired man who don't amount to shucks—cuts with his knife and fork and says that Boston is in New Jersey. If I was you I wouldn't let him get the idea that you was a kindred spirit."

"No, I won't."

Miss White was left at the house of the Widow Harkness, which was to be her first boarding place. Supper was not yet finished when the widowers began to gather, and in the course of half an hour the whole six were there. Their excuses were various, but the fact was apparent that they had come to size the schoolma'am up. Once there no one would go and leave the others behind to get some advantage. The clock had struck midnight when the widow turned them all out in a bunch. There wasn't exactly a fight outside the gate, but the six told each other what they thought of hair dye and old gals. When they were gone the schoolma'am turned to the widow and asked:

"Don't any of those men want you for a wife?"

"Not if they can get you," was the doleful reply.

Ten minutes of confidential talk settled things. The schoolhouse was close by, and on its door was tacked the notice:

"This place closed for repairs."

At daylight next morning the widow harnessed a horse to her democrat wagon, and within two hours Miss White was landed at the spot where the moderator had found her. When the community learned that she had gone those six old widowers looked at each other and said:

"Durn your buttons, but it was your gab and your hair dye that driv her away, and you ought to be ashamed of yourself."
